Stories can intentionally challenge, uplift, and disincentivize. Compassionate Communication Stories help readers and listeners see the wide array of perspectives, experiences, and emotions that exist within their community and care. Pathways to Promise wants stories to be empowering, not exploitative. Read the Compassionate Communication Stories Policy to learn more about the intentionality behind the creation of these tools.

When thinking about mental health, we all process it in different ways. I know I am known to ramble on some when we share food and drink together. Others are more reserved and quiet. Some of us are extroverts and others are introverts. Some of us are more analytical and others are more emotional. Some of us are more practical and others are more philosophical. Some of us are more... The Way of Compassionship: Welcoming Care with Him. This requires us to lower our defenses and acknowledge our vulnerability, often laying aside the things we use to shore ourselves up. This is the place where mental health enters the picture; it can be incredibly painful (and dangerous) to suddenly abandon coping strategies that are keeping us afloat. My hope is that this article can provide some guidance on how to participate in Lent while also making mental health a priority. If we are to give ourselves to God completely as we are, we must make room for our mental and emotional state."

Employee Appreciation Day - March 6

"Employee Appreciation Day, observed annually on the first Friday of March, is a prime opportunity for organizations to recognize and celebrate the dedication of their workforce. In 2025, National Employee Appreciation Day falls on March 7th, and it's the perfect occasion to boost morale and foster a positive workplace culture. By implementing thoughtful and impactful initiatives, like an employee relief fund, employers can show genuine gratitude while enhancing employee engagement."

Raising Awareness, Breaking Stigma, and Spreading Hope in the World Bipolar Day

Why It Matters

Bipolar disorder affects more than 40 million people worldwide, yet stigma, misinformation, and misunderstanding still surround it. World Bipolar Day is an opportunity to:

- Educate the public about the condition and its many faces.
- Encourage open dialogue about mental health.
- Support those living with bipolar disorder in feeling seen, heard, and understood."

"Every year on March 30, people around the globe recognize World Bipolar Day, a powerful moment to educate, advocate, and amplify the voices of those living with bipolar disorder. The date was chosen to honor the birthday of Vincent van Gogh, the legendary artist who is believed to have lived with bipolar disorder.
