Pathways to Promise & Mental Health Ministries

Pathways to Promise and Mental Health Ministries are excited to announce the launch of a new partnership and training series. Please read about it below. For more information and training registration, contact Tammy Jones.

Mental Health Ministries Resource Center

Our Mental Health Ministries Resource Center is a very comprehensive repository for mental health and behavioral information. We have intentionally collected resources that are faith-based, Christ-centered, and rooted in God's Word and His relevant guidance. The Mental Health Ministries Resource Center is the culminating work initiated by the Texas Conference of Churches' Mental Health Ministries Initiative (MHMI).

When Rev. Sara Gauge-Schroeder led Mental Health Ministries, she included a brief meditation in each issue of the Spotlight, which she called "Snippets from the Heart." We have decided to continue this practice in each issue of the Spotlight. Here's the one we sent out for Spring 2020 issue:

"Loaves and Fishes"

by Sarah Gauge-Schroeder
Agatha Christie Throughout, © Spotlight, Summer 2013

In a sermon, Donna Tuck, Director of Pastoral Care at the Methodist Hospital, told about a time when she was feeling overwhelmed by the needs of the people around her.

The first thing Donna did was to pray that God would provide. Until we can be miraculously multiplied, it is a comfort to know that God is the One Who can multiply our meager resources. Then Donna made a list of the many ways of bread and fish fellow Christ, he blessed them. Then he fed the crowds. He commanded his disciples to gather the leftovers. There was more than enough. Donna's list of ways to help included:

Donna's list of ways to help included: Asking God to provide the strength. Praying and thank giving God for everything that Christ Jesus did on our behalf. Asking God to bless what we have to offer. Trusting God to multiply our efforts. Asking God to help us see the blessings in the midst of the challenges.

This summer I hope you will take time to give thanks for the blessings all around you.

Take time to claim your strengths.
Give a gift of God.
Pray for God's help.
Put God's way of handling you your advantage.
Take time to grow yourself.
Take time to rejoice.
Take time to trust yourself.
Get inside you.
Take time to be with others.
Help tell Jesus love, and you will know them.
Take time to listen here.
Let Jesus in your life.
A blessing adapted by Catholic Daily

JULY

These resources are helpful for any time, although intended to highlight themes from the Mental Health calendar for July.

July is Disability Pride Month

"Many LGTBI parents and caregivers are walking daily with children in adult bodies who have developmental disabilities. Many of these children are also LGTBI. If a transsexual or transracial reality, pervasive or physical challenges, or the complexity of neurodivergent/gender differences, these realities affect entire families.

Disability has strong benefits. In education, employment, businesses, or inclusion. Its caregivers, we often advocate not just for our loved ones, but for the rights of others. Disability is a fluid experience that affects us all.

Like physical experiences, it ones how challenges can be met with creativity and invisible. Our family has faced addiction recovery, HIV, and mental health challenges. Each time we have helped up, and hopefully has done to inspire. For the whole family."

July is National Mental Health Awareness Month

This is National Minority Mental Health Awareness Month. It is a time to bring awareness to the unique challenges that racial and ethnic minorities in the United States face when it comes to mental illness. In 2020, fewer than one in five adults with mental illness received treatment. Black, Latinx, and Asian Americans were 50 percent less likely to receive mental health treatment than white Americans, and they are more likely to have a form of health insurance, less access to treatment, and more barriers to care.

July is International Self-Care Month

"Whole months like each of Self-Care Month, what ends with Self-Care Day on 24 July. This symbolic day was chosen because self-care can be practiced "24 hours a day/7 days a week".

Self-Care Month is an opportunity to:

- raise additional awareness about self-care and self-care interventions
- share information that may help bring to people's lives and to assist them achieve it in full
- call for renewed commitments and action to expand health systems to include self-care interventions"

Self-Care Day - July 24

International Self-Care Day: What's Your ONE Thing?

Recently, I've been making a list of things I want to have more or less in my life. Whether it's the clutter that's piled up around the "emergency meals we never eat" cupboard or the number of times I've hit the snooze button, I've found that this exercise has to be curated to "WHAT'S the one thing" I'm going to do that is going to transform my life in some way.

I realized that this could be applied to so many areas of my life and, suddenly, self-care didn't seem so daunting anymore. When it comes to my morning routine, I'll ask myself "What's the ONE thing I can do to start my day off in a way that has the most positive impact on my life?"

National Schizophrenia Awareness Day - July 25

"National Schizophrenia Awareness Day, marked on 25 July every year by the Sidney Mental Illness, explains what it means to live with the condition and how to support those who are affected by it.

In England, approximately one adult in every 100 will live with a diagnosis of schizophrenia.

Dr Andre Ankosaway (Sanu), Aquinus Medical Director (South), has answered some common questions about the condition."

"Watching a loved one live with untreated schizophrenia is a distressing experience. Sadly, the stigma attached to mental illness often leads to people with schizophrenia hesitate as they see their loved one struggle to function in daily life. This is especially true for teenagers and young adults.

AUGUST

These resources are helpful for any time, although intended to highlight themes from the Mental Health calendar for August.

August is Back to School Season

"As the heat of the summer reaches its peak, and (hopefully soon) grow into the cooler autumn breezes, it's time for children and youth to return to school. Whether this is in person, online, or a hybrid of the two, it's a time of new opportunities! … It is an annual ritual for millions of students across our nation. Unfortunately, for many students with mental health conditions, returning to the mainstream will exert intense fear and anxiety. It's also about mental health.

The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) is committed to promoting mental health and preventing substance misuse as a critical component of overall health and well-being. Mental health problems can lead to severe anxiety, loneliness, and academic difficulties that can result in poor school performance and dropping out.

International Day of the World's Indigenous People - August 9

In order to raise awareness of the needs of these population groups, every 9 August the International Day of the World's Indigenous Peoples is celebrated. The date, adopted in December 1994 by UN General Assembly resolution 49/214, marks the date of the first meeting of the UN Working Group on Indigenous Populations, which took place in Geneva in 1982, and the Protection of Human Rights held in Geneva in 1982.

Each year, UNESCO marks the celebration of the day by sharing information on projects and activities that are relevant to the annual theme.

"On this day, let us remember that indigenous cultures are always changing, adapting and developing, and that they are not relics of the past, but part of the world. We must protect their traditions and ways of life – while supporting their rights."

Women's Equality Day: Nurturing Mental Health for Empowerment

"According to Mental Health Daily, gender inequality impacts women all over the world, and research on how social systems damage female mental health is clear. It limits, fewer job opportunities, and unequal pay for equal work. Women are also more likely to be victims of violence, sexual assault, and significantly impact women's mental health in various ways."

National Grief Awareness Day - August 30

"In Matthew 5:4, Jesus says: "Blessed are those who mourn, for they shall be comforted."

These words stand at the heart of the Beatitudes Jesus' vision of a life shaped by God's love and grace. Jesus knows that we will all experience grief and loss in a world that often sends pain and rewards appearances of strength and control.

Our culture tends to celebrate success stories and triumphs, often leaving little space for remembering our losses and failures. But Jesus has a different kind of vision for us. He wants us to be honest about our pain, to name it, and to allow it to lead us to deep hope, grief, and lasting comfort."

What is National Grief Awareness Day?

"Loss can be among the most challenging human experiences an individual can face. Whether it's the loss of a loved one, a job, or a pet, the pain of losing something we valued. National Grief Awareness Day, on August 30th of every year, is generally designed to raise awareness for the experience of grief, which can be overwhelming and all-consuming. If you're struggling with grief, Grief Awareness Day may actually take time to self-care, join a support group, and remember those you've lost."

September is Hispanic Heritage Month (9/15-10/15)

"The first day of Hispanic Heritage Month is September 15, which is Independence Day for several Central American countries (Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua) and the day before Mexico's Independence Day. The month ends on October 15 and coincides with Día de la Raza, or Columbus Day. Hispanic Heritage Month was originally established to celebrate Hispanic Heritage first, it's an ideal time to reflect and vow on how we can be more inclusive and welcoming to all. Here are a few ways you can celebrate Hispanic Heritage Month and support Hispanic communities and latinx communities here: Invite countries contributions to our nation's culture. Learn about the many Hispanic and Latinx American mental health challenges. Apply for scholarships when these opportunities.
